Following a most delightful visit covering a period of several months, which was enjoyed in Nebraska, Iowa and Colorado, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Black have returned to their home on Park avenue.

J. Bailey Hickman and Thomas Gillette have returned from a week's camping trip which was enjoyed at the terminus of the Big Tehuenga canyon.

Webb and daughters of North Maryland avenue, Mr. and Mrs. John McMillan and little son Jack of Los Angeles.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

In honor of her eleventh birthday Katherine Hendricks entertained sixteen of her little friends at a party in her home, 804 West Fifth street, which had been decorated for the occasion with a profusion of pink carnations and ferns.

Childhood games whiled the afternoon away and prizes awarded were won by Alice and Charles Breer.

At 4 o'clock Katherine led her little guests into the dining-room, where dainty refreshments were served, the principal of which was a beautiful birthday cake decorated with pink roses and surrounded by eleven pink candles.

Those present, all of whom presented Katherine with pretty and highly appreciated gifts, were Mary Breunig, Alice Breer, Dorothy Breunig, Charles Breer and Margaret Breunig of Los Angeles; Winifred Brewer, Reba Bonner, Elizabeth Brewer, Glendale Bronner, Margaret Crawford, Harold Tipton, Olive Simon, Edith May Nelson, Warren Rolph and Robert Hendricks of Glendale; Mrs. B. WET AND DRY AS FACTORS IN SELLING REAL ESTATE

(The Los Angeles Realty Board, 500 members, passed a resolution unanimously opposing the adoption of the state constitutional dry amendment.)

OFFICE J. BUNKUM,

Real Estate.

Bunkum (rising)—Good morning, Mr. Eazee; was very glad to see your name among arrivals at Hotel Waverly, and after you have taken a good sufficient rest you no doubt will be looking for chances to invest. So when the spirit moves you and you are ready quite I've residential bargains at prices that are right, and as for situation none better can be found; call on me when it suits you and I will show you around.

Then Eazee—I've labored long and hard enough to take a little rest. Heard much of your glorious climate and fruits and flowers out west and so with wife and children from storms we've broke away. We're in the sunny Southland and we expect to stay. 'Twas only yester evening we took a little run, and as through Happy Hollow somewhat in haste we spun, so much of real beauty around us caught the eye that wife and children chorused, "Pa, that's the place to buy." That flower-covered chateau resting on yonder hill we hastily concluded would meet the family bill. A "for sale" card was on it, your name attached thereto, so I came round this morning to see what I could do. And if for the place mentioned a trade there could not be, I'd ask about the price of lots in that vicinity. While outside of a building looks pleasing to the eye, inside you reach conclusions, you'd rather build than buy.

Then Bunkum—Your point of admiration most worthily was placed, and proves that in location you have superior taste. In all of Happy Hollow none better can be found than property extending across that rising ground. That chateau, forty thousand, and at that price it's cheap, and as a mere investment great profit you would reap. While from five up to ten thousand those lots are rated flat, and I earnestly assure you they're very cheap at that. (At that announcement Eazee for breath gave heavy gasp, while on the back of Bunkum's chair he took a firmer grasp. And murmured inarticulate his very great surprise that such a little piece of ground to such great worth could rise.)

When Bunkum to enlighten him—Yes, property is high and gilt-edged, sir, in every way, because the town is dry. Would you, my friend, be coming to buy a lot of me, if yonder school house rising was for a brewery. Costing one hundred thousand, in beauty unsurpassed, and the town improves so rapidly they have to build them fast. I have cheap lots in Bungtown. Say, would you there abide if palace house was on it, a saloon on either side. The only building going up and to be finished soon will merely add to the long list another cheap saloon. You see, if lots are worthless or rated very high depends entirely whether the town is wet or dry.

Then Mr. Eazee, taking his hand from Bunkum's chair, while his granger visage put on a somewhat puzzled air, said—Bunkum, here's a circular with your good name attached, which through the eastern country by mail has been dispatched, in which you real estate men most earnestly decry, and solemnly protest against the state going dry, and yet you strongly argue, this I shall not forget, that you can do no business in any town that's wet. That you are inconsistent I scarcely need to say, that I'll buy in the dry you need not doubt, but not of you, good day.

COUNTRY HOPES FOR BEST

WAR CLOUD'S SILVER LINING

The one hope of civilization coming from the carnage now in progress in Europe is that out of all this murderous frenzy may come disarmament. The tone of the British press strongly favors such a program, as note the following compilation of views from London newspapers:

"Great Britain will not consider peace until Prussian militarism has been crushed forever on land and sea, it was declared here by men in close touch with the British government.

"Officials expressed themselves as amazed at the suggestion that the United States was anxious to propose compromise. They said they felt the allies' position must be misunderstood at Washington, or such a program would never have been thought of. The only peace acceptable to Great Britain," declares the Times, "must be concluded at Berlin and must include the dispersal of the German war fleet. Any lesser humiliation of Germany," the Times asserted, "would meet with popular disapproval among the British."

The allies' agreement not to make terms with the Teutonic government except by mutual understanding among themselves, it was added on official authority, ended Germany's chance to negotiate individual peace treaties.

It was admitted, however, that the failure of the Kaiser's initial campaign against Paris might hasten a termination of hostilities.

In some quarters predictions were made of an internal uprising which would change the form of the government.

Those who prophesied such an outcome declared there had from the first been a strong undercurrent of opposition to the war throughout Germany, hostilities having been popular only in Prussia.

The German people, as a whole, said men familiar with conditions in the fatherland, would never forget the Kaiser's mistake in plunging the country into a war in which nearly all the rest of the world was arrayed against it. These critics of the situation gave it as their opinion that it was possible that his majesty would be forced to abdicate.

For the German's loss of the battle of the Marne, the British war office holds overconfidence and overwork mainly responsible.

This diagnosis was accompanied by a general review of operations.

General French accused the Germans of treating the inhabitants of territories they occupied with great brutality. Many chateaux were pillaged or destroyed by them, he asserted.

According to General French, the Germans apparently thought September 4th that the British were crushed and that only the French were left for them to deal with.

General Von Kluck accordingly began a flanking march across the allies' lines, evidently intending to split them in two, but was outgeneraled and then attacked by the Paris garrison, which sallied from its defenses to help the French and British field forces.

Numerous letters found on the persons of dead Germans showed, said the British commander, that the Kaiser's soldiers thought they were about to enter Paris when the retreat was begun.

September 7th Von Kluck realized that he was in great danger and ordered the retreat. At that time the British force and the French sixth army were co-operating with one another against the German rear and right flank.

Only a precipitate flight saved the Germans.

ELROSE THIMBLE CLUB

Mrs. W. Workman of 137 Elrose avenue used pink and white roses as embellishments in the rooms in which she received members of the Elrose Thimble Club on Wednesday afternoon of this week, and also carried out this same delicate combination in the deliciously dainty collation which she served about 4 o'clock.

Guests for the two hours of needlework and social chatter were Mrs. S. Cozad, Mrs. L. Grafious, Mrs. W. Van Osdel, Mrs. Charles Archer, Mrs. C. S. Foss and Miss Edythe Foss, all of whom, together with the hostess, will be entertained again in two weeks by Mrs. Grafious, of 144 Elrose avenue.

These things ramify to such an extent that it is impossible to estimate how far they may reach into the future. Imagine, for instance, how the descendants of the American refugees in 1914 will be likely to dwell, in 2014, on the experiences of their ancestors.

SIGNS OF PEACE IN EUROPE

Kaiser Wilhelm, in a communication received by the state department late Wednesday afternoon, has confirmed the informal declaration of the German ambassador that Germany is willing to make peace.

The emperor's views are in response to the cablegram sent by Secretary of State Bryan immediately following the latter's conference with Count von Bernstorff on Labor Day. It will be recalled that as the result of a dinner in New York where the ambassador announced Germany desired peace, Oscar Straus of New York, who was present, accepted a mission to bring the matter to the attention of the Washington government. Both Mr. Straus and Count von Bernstorff impressed upon Secretary Bryan the fact that the expression of the latter was "purely informal," and was not to be understood as being the official declaration of the Berlin government. Mr. Bryan deemed it sufficiently well founded to bring it to the attention of the British, French and Russian governments, receiving replies from each. In addition he cabled to Ambassador Gerard, asking him to ascertain if the ambassador correctly interpreted the sentiments of the German government.

In the meantime, the German right wing is now encircled by the allies, according to an Amiens dispatch to the Daily News.

The German and allied armies are again facing each other on a line stretching from Noyon to Metz, a distance of nearly two hundred miles. Rear-guard actions have been fought with the Germans disputing every inch of territory until their armies again get into alignment to oppose the allies. All reports indicate that these actions have been severe, but they are considered of minor importance in comparison with the great new battle now threatened. The official statement issued by the French government is of the most meager character.

DONATIONS MOST LIBERAL

The solicited donations for the box of home-made jams and jellies to be sent to the Los Angeles orphanage by the St. Mark's Guild of Glendale were most generously forthcoming, and as a result a large box was carefully packed and sent on its way to gladden the hearts of the homeless little waifs who have no mothers of their own to prepare such goodies.

The women of the Guild extend their sincerest thanks to those who so kindly assisted with donations and certainly appreciate the generous help.

A short business session followed the packing of the fruit and details were completed for the Christmas bazaar, which will be given by the St. Mark's Guild the fore part of December. A large number were present and much was accomplished.

RULES FOR BORROWERS

The United States department of agriculture, which has of late taken considerable interest in the matter of farm credits and has placed in process of evolution a farm bureau for loaning money, has recently issued a little booklet regarding farm credits. In the book are several rules regarding the borrowing of the money, of which the most important are these:

That the money sought to be borrowed will, if applied to its purpose, produce a greater return than is needed to pay the debt.

That the length of time the loan is to run should have a close relation to the productive life of the improvement for which the money is borrowed.

That provision should be made in the long-time loans for the gradual reduction of the principal.

These rules for agricultural borrowers are equally good for borrowers of any sort. The first of the three is at the foundation of all successful borrowing. The second is a necessity if trading on credit or working on credit is to be carried on. For lack of due regard to it, many a railroad has become bankrupt, and been left with nothing except useless and worn-out rolling stock to represent bonds still current, but which should have been paid before the equipment for which they were issued was sent to the dumps. The third is the general provision of all state and municipal bonds issued with a sinking fund provision.

The purpose of the government circular is to induce farm borrowers to apply to their monetary transactions the same sound principles that in any other line of finance would be obligatory.

LITTLE SHORT STORIES

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS GATHERED IN THE DAY'S SEARCH FOR NEWS

F. W. ANDERSON AS HUNTER

F. W. Anderson of 320 Cedar street is one of the proudest fellows we have encountered for some time. He went up into the mountains back of La Crescenta Tuesday morning and returned victorious only a few hours later with a fine three-pronged buck. This fellow had the most beautiful perfectly-formed antlers imaginable.

Mr. Anderson's friends, who are jealous of his prowess as a woodsman and a hunter, are voicing the suspicion that he captured the animal last year and has had it corralled the past year, during which time he has been watching the development of the third prong.

PREPARE FOR VISITORS

Brand boulevard property owners are showing the right spirit. A meeting has been called of all those owning property on Brand between Colorado boulevard and the Tropic city line to meet Saturday evening at the office of John Roman to talk over plans for beautifying that section of the city in preparation for the many visitors who will come here next year. This is indeed a commendable move.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AUXILIARY

The Young People's Auxiliary of the Dry Federation will give an entertainment in the Glendale Union high school Friday evening, Sept. 18, at 8 o'clock. There will be some interesting numbers on the program, which is in part:

Orchestra selection.

Male quartet.

Reading, "A Voice From the Poor House."

The Y. P. B. chorus and other good numbers.

Mr. H. A. Wheeler will address the audience on the issues of the day—questions before each and every voter in California at the present time.

Mr. Wheeler is a most interesting speaker, whom you can't afford to miss hearing.

It is hoped he will have a large and attentive audience, as a representation of the most worthy citizenship of Glendale.

Don't forget the place, the time and the hour.

BARACA MONTHLY MEETING

The Baraca class of the First Baptist church will hold their monthly meeting at the home of Harry Chase, corner First and Isabel street. All members are urged to be present as this is an important meeting and subjects of the utmost importance are to be brought before the meeting. Come and hear what the social committee has in store for you.

ASK FOR INCREASED SPACE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17—Japan has asked for increased exhibit space at the Panama-Pacific International exposition. The communication was from Acting Consul General Y. Numano, who had authority from the government, and Commissioner General Yamawaki. Application was made for 10,700 square feet of additional space in the Palace of Manufactures, and 1700 square feet of additional space in the Palace of Food Products. The application for the space in the Palace of Manufactures has been granted and this brings the total to 33,188 square feet for Japan. The original allotment for Japan in the Palace of Food Products was 4200 square feet.

FIESTA LUNCHEON

MRS. MATTISON B. JONES ENTERTAINS FOR PROGRAM COMMITTEE INFORMALLY

Why call the informal luncheon presided over Wednesday noon by Mrs. Mattison B. Jones of 106 Orange street, a "fiesta luncheon?" Because the committee in charge of the program to be given at the Tuesday Afternoon Club fiesta next month were the guests and because the customary colors, red and yellow, prevailed in the table decorations and salad and dessert courses served.

Mrs. William Herman West, Mrs. E. V. Lawton and Miss Bertha Jackson were those present and much interest was taken by all in making the necessary plans for this big out-of-doors fete, which will take place at the attractive La Ramada, North Glendale.

Miss Bertha Jackson will stage the productions planned, the afternoon entertainment being "Hiawatha," played by children and staged beneath the huge old pepper tree back of La Ramada. This natural setting will be beautiful as will also be the Indian music played by the accomplished Mrs. Leroy W. Bosserman.

A "three-shows-a-night" pantomime play has also been planned by these enthusiastic ladies. The first will be a series of American girls in poses, the cast of characters to be given later.

A Scotch burlesque on the poem, "Lochinvar," the leading roles of which will be portrayed by Mr. and Mrs. William Herman West, Mrs. C. L. Peckham and Mr. Mattison B. Jones, will also be given with appropriate music played by Mrs. E. V. Lawton, whom we all know and have heard. This promises to be great!

A beautiful Spanish romance, in which Mr. Frederick Baker will be starred and supported by Mr. and Mrs. Van Etton, Miss Myrtle Pulliam and others to be named later, will be given in costume, and in all probability will play to a capacity house. Mrs. Lawton will also play the piano accompaniment to this.

Pantomime features are something new and novel in Glendale and are something which must be seen, as they cannot be heard.

On Monday next Mrs. Jones, who is the busy little president of the club, will entertain with another luncheon in her home, having as guests the chairmen of all the committees and sections of the club, who are planning gorgeous booths and attractive features to be made known later.

MR. AND MRS. BRALEY RETURN

Friends have received word from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Braley, the latter formerly Mrs. Mary Howard Gridley, that they will arrive in Glendale Sunday morning from their honeymoon journey. Mr. and Mrs. Braley had expected to tour the world, but were prevented by the war. However, they have covered about 10,000 miles of their own country, including many points of interest in the East and in Utah, besides a visit to the Yosemite.

They will begin at once the work of remodeling their home on North Brand boulevard, where they will reside. It was understood that Mr. and Mrs. Braley would not make their home in Glendale, so this announcement comes as a most happy surprise to the lady's many friends here, all of whom most heartily welcome Mr. Braley among us.

STUNT PARTY

One of the most enjoyable events planned for this week is the "stunt party" at Butler's hall, 335 1/2 South Brand boulevard, tomorrow night. The senior girls of the Glendale Union high school will be hostesses for the evening, which has been planned in honor of the freshmen girls. The guests will be none but members of the fair sex, all of whom have been requested to appear in costume.

VISITOR TO LEAVE SUNDAY

Miss Georgia Higley, who since the first of August has been a house guest of her aunt, Mrs. L. B. Simon, 1434 Vine street, will leave Sunday next for her home in Chicago. Since her arrival Miss Higley has enjoyed many delightful social affairs as well as short trips to places of interest in the near vicinity of Glendale and Los Angeles.

Miss Higley just returned from a brief sojourn at Long Beach and on Friday evening of this week will be the complimented guest at an informal dinner party presided over by Mrs. Robert Martin of the Park View apartments on Orange street.

SEEN IN A CEMETERY

Take a walk through a cemetery alone and you will pass the resting place of a man who tried to look into the muzzle of a gun to see if it was loaded. A little further down the slope is the crank who tried to show he could stand next a moving train when it passed. In strolling about you will see the monument of the hired girl who tried to start the fire with gasoline, and a grass covered knoll that covers the boy that tickled the mule's legs. That tall shaft over the man who blew out the gas casts a shadow over the boy who tried to get on a moving train. Side by side the pretty creature who always had her corset laced on the last hole, and the intelligent idiot who rode the bicycle nine miles in ten minutes, sleep unmolested. At repose is the doctor who took a dose of his own medicine. There with a top of a shoe box driven over his head is the rich old man who married a young wife. Away over there reposes a boy who went fishing on Sunday, and the woman who kept strychnine powders in the cupboard. The man who stood in front of the mowing machine to oil the sickle is quiet now and rests beside the careless brakeman who fed himself to the seventy-ton engine, and nearby may be seen the grave of the man who tried to whip the editor.—Ex.

Of the Roman people, who once ruled the world, there is little more than a handful left. This rather startling condition was brought to light when a recent attempt was made at Rome to organize a "Society of Romans of Rome." There remains at Rome only a small solitary quarter where enough Romans live to justify saying that portion of Rome is still Roman.

The people of the United States manifestly are willing to provide money to meet all necessary expenses of government, but they insist on knowing that all expenses of government at this time are necessary.

By A. M. McPHERSON, Deputy.

Have you had any letters from friends back yonder asking "Is California going dry? If so, we may come to the fair. We would not care to come otherwise." Vote dry.

Horace Greeley sixty years ago wrote of the very low condition of the people of the vineyard sections of France, who seemingly had no ambition to rise to anything better.

"DRY" POINTERS
West Virginia passed from wet to dry without any serious social or business upheaval. Breweries became packing houses, distilleries and saloons manufacturing centers large and small, employing sober people.

The beer and booze tars of California are having a harder fight than they advertise because of similar fights in other states, notably Ohio, with which state they are forced to divide the "funds" with which they intended to beat the drys here.

What a manly, open campaign the wets are conducting! Have you seen the long list of meetings for joint discussions with the drys?
Guess not, nor will you see such list.

FOR A RAINY DAY

The careful husband had given his wife some money to put into the family sinking fund, but she had spent it. Two or three days after she asked for more.

"Didn't I give you some last Monday?" he inquired in the well-known manner of husbands under similar circumstances.

"Yes, but I spent it."

"Spent it? I thought you had laid it away for a rainy day?"

"I did, Henry," she smiled sweetly. "I bought a raincoat, an umbrella and a pair of rubbers with it."

—Lippincott's.

The saloon is the hypocaust or longest side of a dangerous triangle, the wine room and gambling being the other factors. Were the last two broken away from the first, it would dry up half the licensed saloons in the country. It takes the combine to succeed and no municipality seems strong enough to break the combination.

UNPOPULAR AT HOME

Reports received from Los Angeles at different times show conclusively that the people of that city are by no means united in favor of the consolidation proposition. A determined effort was made one day last week to secure an endorsement for it from the Los Angeles Realty board, and that body positively refused to have anything to do with it. This action was taken after arguments had been made before the board by City Attorney Stephens and some of the other leaders of the movement, numbering the brightest men and best talkers on that side of the question. They were opposed by A. A. Dennison, secretary of the Oakland chamber of commerce, and Senator Lee C. Gates. These gentlemen proved fully equal to the task they had undertaken and when they had completed their showing against the amendment there was a general feeling through the meeting that it was a mighty good thing to defeat.

Mr. Dennison dissipated any thought there may have been in the minds of his hearers as to either of the two propositions being supported by any considerable number of the influential men of Oakland. He explained that the movement there had been fathered and was being supported by a bunch of politicians who were expecting to secure a place if it proved to be successful. The real motive behind the proposed amendment, so far as San Francisco was concerned, he said, was to absorb Oakland and nothing else. Numerous efforts to do this had been made in the past, but had failed, and now this measure was brought forward to do by indirection what could not be done directly. The people of Oakland did not want to be absorbed, neither did they want to absorb any other city. All they wanted was to be let alone to work out their own destiny. The adoption of the amendment would mean very grave disaster to some of the counties of the state, and trouble and expense to all.

Senator Gates was even more emphatic in his denunciation of the plan. He supported the assertion made by Mr. Dennison that San Francisco merely wanted to take in the populous and wealthy territory across the bay. It had always wanted to do this, but never so anxiously as since the wonderful growth made during the years immediately following the fire. Oakland had gone forward with such tremendous strides during that time, and had demonstrated so thoroughly the value of her harbor frontage that she had become a prize worth every effort. Then there was the added incentive that these additions would make San Francisco the largest and wealthiest city of the state, and he was surprised to find Los Angeles men who were short sighted enough to help their rival to sink them into second place. He further said that in many counties cities could take the very heart out of them and leave the fragments to do the best they could for themselves. If this should happen there would ensue the most deplorable condition in all these counties and the whole state would be affected by the state of chaos that would result.

At the close of the argument the supporters of the amendment were so evidently worsted that many, who had previously been disposed to favor them, deserted to the other side. The refusal of the board to endorse their proposition was a decided blow to their hopes and an equally decided inspiration to their opponents. It shows at once that there is no certainty of Los Angeles giving a majority for its own measure, and without that there is little hope of its being adopted by the state as a whole. Nothing has happened of late which offers so much encouragement to the outside towns and communities which are fighting this proposition in sheer self defense, and they will now be able to take up the succeeding phases of their struggle with a much better spirit. —Pasadena News.

BUSINESS PICKING UP

In spite of all that may be said, business is picking up in Glendale. Money may be scarce, but business is here and with it will come money later. The step of the real estate agent is quickening, and the average citizen is cheering up. The effects of the European war scare are over and conditions are fast growing better.

Strains of a gramophone playing "The Merry Widow" waltz and "God Save the King" were heard lately by wireless on a ship during a voyage to Buenos Ayres. The ship was passing Vigo at the time and afterward it was found that the ship from which the wireless came was a private yacht 200 miles away.

IMMUTABILITY

Woman began at zero and has through ages slowly unfolded and risen. Each age has protested against growth as unsexing woman. Men might spin and churn and knit and sew and cook and rock the cradle for generations and not be women. And woman will not become man by external occupations. God's colors do not wash out. Sex is dyed in the wool.—Henry Ward Beecher.

-what successful Imperial Valley ranchers say about Milford Valley Lands at $30 per acre

A FEW days ago the group of Imperial Valley ranchers pictured above visited the lands of the newly opened Milford Valley irrigation project. They are men who took advantage of the opportunities that existed in Imperial valley several years ago. They made money. A few weeks ago they heard about Milford Valley of Southern Utah. They went up and made a thorough investigation, as only practical men can do. The Western Union Night Letter reproduced above was sent by them to Curtis Hopgood, an Imperial Valley rancher who was unable to make the trip to the valley, but requested them to wire him immediately if conditions were absolutely as represented.

These men bought generously of the rich, red, loamy lands of beautiful Milford Valley. They knew that this $30 land (with a perpetual water right at $70 per share, payable in 12 years, if desired) would be easily worth $250 or more an acre when in alfalfa. They appreciated the value of a water maintenance cost that should not exceed 30 cents per acre per annum. They reveled in the glorious mountain air of the valley—elevation 4971 ft. They enthused over the pure, soft, sparkling drinking water. They realized that this was a successful man's land. They knew that land sold on a cash basis would eliminate the homesteader class of settlers. They bought within sight of Milford, a progressive city—an important railroad center. They were alive to the crop possibilities—in alfalfa, potatoes, grain, dairying, hog raising and deciduous fruit culture. They saw another Imperial Valley opportunity in Southern Utah. That they bought land right on the spot is a wonderful tribute, a splendid testimonial to Milford. Imperial Valley men surely know good land.

This land opportunity is going fast. If you buy now you gain an overwhelming advantage over the late comers—by buying suburban to the city of Milford. Write or call today for illustrated booklet which tells about the best valley in the West—about land that is being sold at only a fraction of its real value.

HERBS AND THEIR USES

The season for drying sweet herbs, our precious aromatic condiments, is just before they begin to flower. Gathered at the height of their season, they are fullest of juice, and so fullest of flavor and perfume. Artificial heat, which dries them quickest, is undoubtedly the best for this sort of preserving. After drying they should be powdered and put away in bottles. When used they are soaked in hot water to restore their freshness.

Fresh herbs have a flavor incomparably finer than the best dried ones, although the latter make an acceptable substitute, so the best should be made of them when they are at their perfection. And this is the time to make herb vinegars.

The most inexpensive of home-made table sauces were formerly made with sweet herbs and hot vinegar, and the lost interest, as well as the lost art, is being restored. These sauces were really quickly made vinegars, just as mint sauce is. Scalding hot vinegar was poured over a bunch of cleaned herbs and scalding hot or "cooked" vinegar is in high favor today for salads in place of the cold.

Out of a long list of herbs only a few come into the market, but many persons grow some of the old favorites in their gardens. Those in the market are tarragon, mint, sage, dill and sometimes thyme and marjoram and always parsley. Others may be found in Italian sections of our great cities and the Greek stores have many of the dried herbs, but so poorly cared for, that their strength is but slight.

Although some of the sweet herbs are ready to use as early as May, the larger number of them are not at their height of excellence until the middle of July or for two or three weeks following. The list of these summer seasonings or condiments is much longer than anyone would believe who had not given the subject attention, and, in addition to the herb proper, many flowers of mild or garden plants and shrubs are used such as the elder flower, the marigold, fennel, or "love in the mist," which must not be confused with baby's wreath, nasturtium or Indian cress.

Tansy is one of the old herbs that was formerly used for puddings and omelets and garnishing, and some of the cookbook makers not so far back have a custard called a tansy. It was flavored with that herb and colored with spinach green. Little Puritan children would certainly never want to eat tansy after wearing a tansy bag, as we used to have to do. The lore of herbs is long and charming.

Here is a short list of herbs and their uses:

Balm—Tastes like lemon; it is used for seasonings, scents, balm tea and balm wine. Its leaves and its stalks are dried for winter use. It is combined with sage in sage tea. It is used in place of thyme in seasoning. The old lemon balm is described as most fragrant and was used for cordials, wine cups and common herb beer.

Sweet Basil—Tastes like cloves. Used for basil vinegar, a cheap substitute for lemons for flavoring both sauces and soups. A tablespoon of it is said to have been the secret of the flavor, the slight but agreeable acidity of the old type of mock turtle soups.

Borage—The young leaves are sometimes used as pot herbs, but it is chiefly used in salads and for making claret cup.

Burnet—Tastes like cucumber. A salad plant, but especially used in making an herb vinegar used to give relish to fish, cold meats and salads. Good burnet vinegar gives the flavor so nearly like cucumber that fine tastes are deceived.

Dill—Like caraway seeds but more bitter. Chiefly used in pickles. The leaves are sometimes used for flavoring.

Elder Flowers—These are combined with tarragon and infused in vinegar and have other old-fashioned uses.

Marigold—The petals of the marigold are used to flavor soups, stews and salads and to make marigold vinegar. They are aromatic and hot. The vinegar is used with fowl and mushroom salads and was formerly considered medicinal. Sweet marigold is considered a satisfactory substitute for tarragon.

Sweet Marjoram—Like sage and savory, the whole plant is dried, and the dried marjoram of commerce is about the only form we use. It is used mainly in fish stuffings and in stews.

Mint—Used in sauces, dried, in tea and other drinks, in vinegar and in fruit salads, cooked with peas, and is used dried with pea soup.

Nasturtium—The leaves and the blossoms have many uses in salads and sandwiches and the seeds while still green are pickled as a substitute for caper sauce.

Rosemary—Used with vinegar to make a sauce like mint sauce and used in the same way. Used like the rose geranium leaf to flavor jellies and jams. Formerly a wider use.

Two things about the order received in the United States for eighty-pound section rails enough to construct a 100-mile railway in South America are equally pleasing. One is that the United States at the present time is in a position to fill the order promptly; the other is that South America is building railroads and putting first-class material into them.
